

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Poor Bookmaking.

Editor of the Virginia Law Register,
Charlottesville, Va.

Dear Sir:

I write to raise the question whether the bar of Virginia are to be forced indefinitely to put up with such poor specimens of book-making as the Virginia Reports and the Code of 1919? For the past thirty volumes or so our reports have been miserably printed and bound and fall to pieces after a reasonable amount of use. Some years ago I sent a box of reports to a binder to be repaired, including some volumes of Grattan and some late reports. I suggested that the Grattans be rebound and the bindings of the later reports merely repaired. The binder reported that he could repair the Grattans but the recent books would have to be rebound. I have seen many of the later Virginia reports go to pieces under use. On my table is a copy of the Code of 1919 which has not been much used, yet the pages are already beginning to come ou..

It would be hard to find better made law books than the Grattans or the Code of 1849, and perhaps equally hard to find as poorly made books as we have been getting for sometime. Can nothing be done about it?

Very truly yours,
Jos. R. LONG.

Lexington, Va.

Individual Names of Partners.

Editor of the Virginia Law Register,
Charlottesville, Va.

Dear Sir:

I have just read with interest and profit your October, 1921, issue of the "Virginia Law Register".

On pages 454 and 455, reference is made to individual names of partners. A few days ago I had a claim sent me by a Richmond corporation against an auto supply company in this city. From the stationery of this auto supply company I could not tell anything about the owners. The clerks either did not know or refused to tell the names of the owners and the records of the salesman only showed the signature as that of the company.

It seemed almost impossible to get the correct information until one day while inquiring about another matter I got the desired information from the office of the Commissioner at which place the license had been issued.

Very truly yours,
CHAS. D. SANDFORD.

Petersburg, Va.